MIRJANA MAVRAK

Professor of pedagogy and psychology, Ph.D in educational sciences

Lecture “Humour as Life Support in Difficult Circumstances: Joke with Love in Bosnia and Hercegovina.”

Humour is often considered as the child of joy but there are some hidden meanings too. A joke exists in reality and vice versa: reality, sometimes cruel and sad, is a joke content. Considered as an important coping mechanism among the others (BAXSIC Ph coping theory, for example), humour is comprehensive term which appears at the meeting point of convention and human nature, helping person and community to survive.

In Bosnia and Hercegovina, the country which lies in the middle of the Balkan peninsula, country with complicated history and disturbing presence, country with many confusions and obstacles in national/state rule-system, humour has been persistent as way of life which helps citizens' survival. The ability to make a joke with love - love for self and love for others - speaks about self-confidence and human creative accommodation to the most traumatic life circumstances.

Mirjana Mavrak, Professor of pedagogy and psychology, has Ph. D in educational sciences (The Quality of Communication among Socialization Factors in Educational work with Healthy and Chronically Ill Children) Recently retired from the position of full professor at University of Sarajevo, Faculty of Philosophy, Department of Education. She is the author and co-author of many publications, three handbooks for professionals in education and adult education (adult education professionals, hospital teachers, medical workers and nurses), monography on personal biography as story about human creativity in science and book on andragogical reception of literature in professional work with humans.*

Her paper “Fostering Inner, Interpersonal and Intergroup Peace through a Gestalt Psychology Approach in Adult Education” as the chapter 6 in book “Peace Pedagogy in Bosnia and Hercegovina. Theories and Practice in Formal Education” (editors Larisa Kasumagić-Kafedžić and Sara Clarke-Habibi) published in 2023 by Springer was awarded by university annual rector’s award. During the war in Bosnia and Herzegovina (1992-1995) she was UNICEF staff member for a year and half leaving UN position in 1994 for continuing with her work with children in hospital and university engagement in the field of education and psychosocial work, with students of different disciplines and teachers and medical staff out of the university, parents and longtermly hospitalized children.

In 36 years of institutional engagement, she was creator, program-coordinator and educator in many education circles for different professional groups. Since 2014. she started more comprehensive engagement in psychotherapeutic education and psychotherapy with adults. Oriented to children's well-being, she devoted her professional development to andragogy and work with adults respecting the fact that there is no education and psychotherapy without an educated professional ready to live lifelong learning in professional development.

VIBEKE LUBANSKI
European Room for Listening

LYUDMYLA KOLISNYK
PhD, counseling psychologist

Lecture “Retreat-Based Practice: Resource Components and their Impact of the Psycho-emotional wellbeing of Ukrainian Psychotherapists and Psychologists in the Context of the Ongoing War.”

This presentation highlights the preliminary results of a pilot study on the impact of retreat-based interventions on the psycho-emotional well-being of Ukrainian psychologists and psychotherapists during the ongoing war. The study aims to examine the effectiveness of retreat-based interventions in enhancing psycho-emotional well-being among professionals working under prolonged crisis and war-related stress.

The research employs a mixed-methods design, including a socio-demographic questionnaire, standardized assessment scales (WHO-5, CORE-10, BSI, HAAS), and semi-structured interviews. The presentation outlines the resource components of the retreat and the specific ways in which they affect the psycho-emotional well-being of Ukrainian psychologists and psychotherapists. The findings are based on 14 interviews with retreat participants conducted in three countries in 2025: Denmark, Poland, and France.

Vibeke Lubanski, Head of Secretariat in the Danish Association for Psychotherapists since 2018. Educational background: Master of Social Science and East European Studies 1999. Family therapist 2015. Right now an active member of the EAP working group European Room for Listening.*

Liudmyla Kolisnyk, PhD, Counselling Psychologist at Sumy State University (Sumy, Ukraine), Postdoctoral Researcher at Aarhus University (Aarhus, Denmark), EuroPsy Psychologist, Board Member of the National Psychological Association of Ukraine.*

Lyudmyla Kolisnyk is a counselling psychologist with 18 years of professional experience, specializing in the psychodynamic approach. She holds a PhD in Developmental and Educational Psychology and is the author of multiple scientific publications as well as educational courses for university students. Her research interests include adolescent psychology and mental health, emotional intelligence, trauma responses, and post-traumatic growth.

In addition, she has been actively involved in professional organizations, serving as a board member of the National Psychological Association of Ukraine and as deputy head of the Association of Psychologists of Higher Education of Ukraine. Following the outbreak of the full-scale war in Ukraine in 2022, she relocated to Denmark with the support of a research grant and has since continued her work in academia and non-governmental organizations, while also providing crisis intervention as well as psychological and psychotherapeutic support to Ukrainians both within and outside the country. One of the directions of her current activity focuses on supporting Ukrainian psychologists and psychotherapists practicing abroad through regular group meetings.
